When I was placed in foster care, straight away I found a friend who felt like a brother to me called Greg. I suffered severe emotional and physical abuse by being strangled really hard and being told "I don't deserve anything" by my foster mum. My foster mum also threw an old Nokia mobile phone at my head for trying to contact my social worker as I didn't want to be in this foster care any more.

My foster mum was given money on my behalf for clothes and food and my foster mum would buy me clothes she knew I wouldn't wear to humiliate me. She would keep my money from me as I was a paperboy, so I had to steal my own money out of her wallet in order to get myself some sweets as a treat for myself as I was the targeted child in the house. Greg has no problem getting his money but I for some reason just wasn't liked by my foster mum.

My foster mum would tell me to go and hide away from visitors if there was any over and I would be in my room crying for hours feeling isolated and left out like I wasn't wanted anywhere within the building, like she was ashamed of me.

My foster mum's name was Christina Allison, she had a husband called David Allison and he didn't physically abuse me but he played a part in emotional abuse by saying "no wonder your parents don't want you"

This was in the district of Edinburgh City Council

I was placed here in the summer of 2004

Oaklands school was quite a physical school when I look back at the time. The male workers there were really physical with us boys by slapping us that hard I was seeing white flashes, putting my hands up by back, putting my arms up to my collarbone and also targeting pressure points on my body.

We was playing a match against kibble and the coach advised that we needed to win the match. I don't know if this was his own personal win maybe against a person of interest on the opposition team but I had missed a goal scoring opportunity and when we got back on the bus after the game the coach slapped me so hard i nearly passed out. This was in front of everybody and I felt humiliated and small, the conclusion to his slap was making me see white flashes.

The way we was treated in this school was poorly, I remember having my shoes taken off me. I also remember 4/5 teachers ganging up on me to restrain me when i wasn't resisting and doing as my told.

This has left me questioning whether I was a naughty child in school but when properly thinking about it, I wasn't. It was the teachers who felt like they got a joy out of bullying and pushing us young boys round.
