I was first placed in care after running away from home. I was sexually abused by my father and my time at home was traumatic. My brother and I were placed in Dalrymple Place. I do not have the best memory of my time there because of the trauma I experienced, but I do remember that I was subjected to many different forms of abuse, including sexual, verbal, and psychological abuse.

I remember the night staff coming into our rooms. One member of staff, in particular, would come to my bed during the night and touch me inappropriately. I remember him moving his hand up my legs and penetrating me with his finger. I screamed and tried to fight him off, but I was only a young girl and he was a grown man. I felt completely powerless and terrified. I tried to report what had happened, but I was dismissed and ignored. The staff protected each other, and nothing was ever done. My voice never mattered. Instead of being believed and protected, I was made to feel as though what had happened to me did not matter. I felt completely abandoned by the very people who were supposed to keep me safe. I had already suffered significant abuse while in the care of my father and was living with constant nightmares and fear. Rather than receiving the care, compassion, and support I desperately needed, I was met with further cruelty. The staff showed no understanding of the trauma I had already endured. The verbal abuse was relentless. I was regularly called a "fat bastard" and told that nobody would ever want me. Those words stayed with me and made me feel worthless and unloved. On one occasion, while we were playing pool, a member of staff became verbally abusive towards me. For the first time, I stood up for myself. In response, he picked up a pool cue and came at me, trying to attack me with it. I remember dropping my own cue and running for my life. Even within a place that was supposed to protect children, I never felt safe. I lived in constant fear, never knowing when I would be humiliated, threatened, or hurt again.

Following my first placement at Darymple, after I ran away, we were put back in the care of my father because we were too scared to speak up about how unsafe we were with him. My father completely battered us, and we ended up running away again. This is when we were put in front of an emergency panel. They decided that we needed to go to a secure unit. So we were sent to Harley place Children's home. I also experienced verbal abuse here. I was in constant hell, feeling abandoned and unwanted.

Whilst I was in the secure unit, I was also placed at Kerelaw. This became another nightmare that I had to endure. Instead of receiving care and protection, I was subjected to further abuse. I remember one member of staff pinning me down and repeatedly slapping me. I felt completely helpless and terrified. After assaulting me, he took me into a room in the Wilson Unit. There was a back room, similar to an office, where he sexually abused me.

I found the courage to report what had happened, but nothing was ever done. My disclosure was never properly investigated, and I was left feeling as though my voice did not matter. Rather than being protected, I was ignored and left to live with what had happened.

I also remember that this was not an isolated incident. Other children experienced similar abuse from multiple members of staff. It was something that many of us lived through, yet we were never given the protection or justice we deserved.

My time at Kerelaw was filled with sexual, physical, and psychological abuse. Instead of being a place of safety, it became another place where I was traumatised. The abuse I experienced there has had a lasting impact on me, and I continue to carry the emotional and psychological effects to this day.
