During my time at Glenrosa, it was an awful experience. From the very beginning, there was a lot of bullying from the other children, and I never felt safe. The staff were just as bad. They would scream and shout at us, and they would lock us in our rooms so we couldn't go out, even on weekends. It felt like a punishment just for existing. There was no sense of care or protection, only fear and isolation.

Sometimes the older boys would hide under the beds and try to sexually assault us. I was already in care because of sexual abuse at home, so being put in a place where the same thing was happening again was extremely traumatic. I felt trapped, like there was no escape from the abuse no matter where I went.

I was physically assaulted almost every single day during the four years I was there. The bullying from the other children was constant — they would beat me up, and the staff knew exactly what was happening. Instead of stepping in or helping, they completely turned a blind eye. It made me feel like my safety didn't matter to anyone. The staff themselves would push and shove us around and scream at us. There was no comfort, no support, and no adult who acted like they cared.

One of the worst memories I have is of one of the senior staff members, a man named Ronnie. He had a small room between the two houses, near the laundry room. He would take us in there one girl at a time while he was developing pictures. I remember him trying to touch me and trying to sexually assault me. He did this to multiple girls. He sexually assaulted me, and he sexually assaulted many others during the time I was there. When I tried to speak up, the staff covered it up. They told me it was "something that happens," and they dismissed it as if it was normal. They didn't protect us — they protected him.

All of this has had a lasting impact on me. I suffer from PTSD and ongoing mental health difficulties because of what I went through at Glenrosa. The combination of physical abuse, sexual abuse, emotional neglect, and the complete failure of the adults who were supposed to protect me has stayed with me throughout my life.
