When I first arrived, I remember being taken to a swimming pool and being made to go in naked while a woman stood watching over us. I felt exposed, confused, and deeply uncomfortable. Not long after that, I was abused by one of the male teachers. He forced me into situations that no child should ever be put in. When I tried to speak up and complain, another teacher took me directly to the man who had harmed me. Instead of being protected, I was punished. He caned me, and when I tried to shield myself, two of my fingers were broken. The names I remember from that time are John Wilson and Francis Berry.

There were other traumatic events as well. I remember John Proudfoot attempting to take his own life by hanging, something that shocked and frightened me as a child. I also remember George Smith bullying me constantly. I reached a point where I felt so desperate and overwhelmed that I tried to push him into the water because I knew he couldn't swim. I was being bullied every day, and I didn't know how else to defend myself. After that incident, the staff beat me. It wasn't a one off. I was beaten badly every couple of weeks—sometimes with a cane, sometimes kicked, sometimes punched.

We were also made to clean all the dormitories—there were four in total—and we had to polish all the floors. The routine felt strict and punishing, almost like being in the army. Every morning we had to make our beds perfectly. At night, we weren't allowed out of the dorms, yet staff would still come into the rooms. I was hit with all sorts of objects—slippers, belts—and if I was in the gym, I could be struck on the back of the head without warning.

It wasn't only the physical abuse. The constant criticism, humiliation, and belittling wore me down emotionally. It shaped me into a very quiet boy, full of fear and anger. When I was released, I lashed out at another boy and kicked him in the jaw—something I deeply regret. That anger stayed with me for a long time.

Despite everything, I have worked hard to change my life. I eventually settled down, got married, and now have three children. I have tried to rebuild myself and move forward, even though the impact of those experiences has stayed with me throughout my life.
