On arrival, i was 4 I was very young, scared, and emotional. I was completely unaware of what was going on around me. I only have vague memories from that time, but I remember being told that I was going home, and instead I was taken to a care home. This caused a lot of confusion and distress for me at such a young age, as I did not understand why I was there or what was happening to my life.

I remember feeling very secluded during my time there. I was often alone, and I felt isolated from others. I was also very frightened because the staff would shout at us and laugh at us. One of the things that has stayed with me the most is how they mocked the way we spoke. As we were Travellers, we had our own way of speaking, and instead of being understood or supported, we were made fun of for it. This deeply affected me. It made me feel ashamed of who I was and where I came from.

Because of this treatment, I became very withdrawn. I stopped speaking as much, especially in that environment, because I was scared that I would be laughed at or humiliated. This had a lasting impact on my confidence and my ability to express myself, even into adulthood. I still struggle with this today, and it has affected how I communicate and interact with others.

I remember being locked in my bedroom a lot. I spent long periods alone, and no staff members ever came to ask if I was okay or to check on my wellbeing. I felt completely neglected and invisible. As a child, I needed care, reassurance, and support, but none of that was given to me.

There are certain memories from that time that have stayed with me and continue to affect me deeply. These experiences have had a lasting impact on my mental health. I now suffer from PTSD and anxiety, and I have never been able to fully trust people. The way I was treated made me feel unsafe around others, and that feeling has followed me throughout my life.

I was often made fun of during my time there, which damaged my self-esteem and sense of identity. I felt like I was being judged and rejected for who I was. As a young child, this was extremely confusing and painful to experience.

I felt completely failed as a child. I was emotional, scared, and did not feel protected or cared for in any way. The lack of support and the way I was treated had a significant impact on my mental health from a very early age. As a result of these experiences, I now suffer from depression, which has affected many aspects of my life.
