During my time at St. Margaret's, things were awful. The environment was extremely strict, We was locked in the house twice a week and we was not allowed to go out after school and we couldn't go out at all then. It was a horrible time because when we was locked in then all the girls would start being mean to each other, its like the staff was encouraging it. and I never felt safe or supported there. The teachers would shout and scream at us regularly, and the atmosphere felt tense and intimidating almost every day. Looking back, I would say that the main harm I experienced there was mental and emotional abuse.

I am quite dark skinned, and during my time at St. Margaret's I was bullied constantly because of the colour of my skin. Other children would make cruel comments, mock me, and call me racial slurs. It happened so often that it became part of my daily life, and it had a deep and lasting impact on my mental health. The words they used made me feel ashamed of who I was, and it took away a lot of my confidence at a young age.

What made it even worse was that the teachers turned a blind eye to it. They saw what was happening, or at least heard it, but they allowed it to continue. There was no intervention, no support, and no attempt to protect me from the racism I was facing. Their silence made me feel even more isolated, as if my pain didn't matter.

Quite often, I would miss meals because I didn't want to sit with the others. The bullying made me feel too anxious and uncomfortable to be in the dining hall, so I would go without eating rather than face more abuse. I was a vulnerable child, and I needed adults to step in and help me, but instead I felt neglected and ignored.

Looking back, I truly believe the staff could have done much more to ensure my safety and wellbeing. The emotional impact of that time has stayed with me, and it is something I still carry today.
