During my time at the Harley Home, my experience was awful. The staff were abusive towards me, and the way they treated me has stayed with me ever since. They would physically and verbally assault me, and there were times when they beat me up for no reason other than their own power and control. I never felt safe there, and I never felt like the adults responsible for my care had any intention of protecting me or supporting me.

There was also a time when I was raped by another young person in the house. Instead of responding with concern or taking any steps to help me, the staff completely ignored what had happened. They didn't report it, they didn't check on me, and they didn't offer any kind of support or safeguarding. It was simply swept under the rug as if it didn't matter. Being left alone to deal with something so traumatic made the situation even worse. I felt invisible, unheard, and completely unprotected.

Looking back, it is clear to me that this was neglect. The staff had a duty to keep me safe, to intervene when something serious happened, and to ensure that I was not exposed to further harm. Instead, they failed me at every level. Their behaviour — both the abuse they carried out themselves and their refusal to act when I was harmed by others — left me in an environment where I was constantly vulnerable.

The impact of what happened at the Harley Home has been long lasting. I was just a young person who needed care, stability, and safety, but instead I was met with violence, indifference, and neglect. The way I was treated there has shaped my trust in adults and authority figures, and it is something I continue to carry with me. The Harley Home was supposed to be a place of protection, but for me it became another place where I was hurt and ignored.

Your statement for Care setting 2 continued

From the age of just two weeks old, my life was already marked by abuse. I had my first ever STD test at that age because I had already been sexually abused. That fact alone shows how unsafe and unprotected I was from the very beginning. Growing up, this pattern continued. Throughout my whole childhood, I was sexually assaulted and abused repeatedly. These were not isolated incidents or things that happened in secret without anyone knowing. Social services were aware of what was happening to me. It is even written in my records that someone admitted to sexually abusing me, yet despite that, I was still sent back into the same unsafe environment where the abuse continued.

Knowing that the people who were supposed to protect me had this information and still chose to return me to danger has had a huge emotional impact on me. It wasn't just a failure—it was complete neglect. I was a child who needed safety, stability, and protection, and instead I was placed back into situations where I was harmed again and again. The very people who were meant to safeguard me allowed the abuse to continue.

I have a copy of my records, and reading them now is devastating. They clearly state that people had admitted to abusing me, yet nothing meaningful was done to protect me. I was left vulnerable, exposed, and repeatedly placed in harm's way. This wasn't just oversight—it felt like I was ignored, dismissed, and treated as though my safety didn't matter.

Because of this, I genuinely believe that social services were complicit in what happened to me. Their actions, or lack of action, directly contributed to the ongoing abuse I suffered. They had the information, they had the responsibility, and they still failed to intervene. The long term impact of that neglect has stayed with me throughout my life. It shaped my sense of safety, my trust in authority, and my understanding of what protection should look like. I was let down at every stage, and the consequences of that have been lifelong.

I actually suffer from Post Concussion Syndrome, Due to the abuse of what happened to me when I was a baby.
