I was in care for approximately six months, and what I experienced during that time was so deeply traumatic that I have blocked much of it out. What I am able to recall, however, has never left me entirely, and I want to set it down as clearly and honestly as I can.

During that placement, we were locked in a cupboard for hours at a time without food or water. We were not allowed to play outside, even on days when the weather was good. We were not permitted to get out of bed before one o'clock in the afternoon. There was another child in the same foster home who used a wheelchair, and he was equally restricted — he was not allowed to do anything either. Seeing another vulnerable child treated that way made everything feel even more hopeless. None of us had any freedom, any voice, or any sense that our wellbeing mattered.

When it came to bathing, the foster father bathed us himself. That was deeply uncomfortable and inappropriate, and it is something that has stayed with me. We were not allowed to speak to our mother unless the foster parents permitted it. Contact with her was controlled and restricted, which was painful. To make matters worse, the foster mother and father actively encouraged us to make up lies about our mother. We were children, and we were being manipulated into saying things that were not true about someone we loved. That felt deeply wrong, even at the time.

Simple things, like having snacks or sweets, were denied to us even when we had done nothing wrong. These might seem like small things, but for a child, being consistently denied basic comforts sends a clear message — that you are not deserving of kindness.

As I have said, I have blocked a great deal of what happened there. It was that traumatic. But what I have shared is what I am able to remember, and when we eventually left that placement, the experiences were reported to Edinburgh Social Services.

What prompted that report, in part, was an incident involving my little sister, who was only two or three years old at the time. She was left unattended and fell down the stairs. She ended up in hospital as a result. That she was left unsupervised at such a young age, in a placement that was supposed to be keeping her safe, is something I still find very difficult to think about. My sister passed away in 2019 from cancer, and her memory is something I carry with me always.

I know that my grandmother has paperwork relating to my time in care somewhere in her home, but I have not yet been able to bring myself to read it. Perhaps one day I will. For now, what I have shared here is my account, told as honestly as I am able, given how much of it I have had to shut away simply in order to cope.
