Dear Iris Stein

All women between the ages of 50 and 70 are invited to go for breast screening every three years. Evidence shows routine screening in this age range is the best way to find breast cancer early.

We're currently inviting women from your GP practice for their screening appointment. Our records show you were unable to attend your last appointment and we would like to offer you an appointment for a time that suits you. You can arrange this by contacting the breast screening service on either the number or email above.

If you're getting in touch by email, please include your name, date of birth, phone number and let us know if you have any special requirements or dates you are available to attend for an appointment.

More information: You can get more information about breast screening from the enclosed leaflet, or you can visit: www.nhsinform.scot/breastscreening

If you have any questions about making an appointment, the appointment time you wish to attend at this time, please let us know by contacting the service on the number or email above. We can then release the appointment for you.
